The Bitstream® Typeface Library is one of the world's great sources of high-quality type for computer-driven printers and typesetters. Constantly growing in size, this catalog includes samples of 1,085 typefaces, available in the various formats required by today's Macintosh® and IBM® PC users.

Founded in 1981 by a group of experienced typographic professionals, Bitstream was the first independent digital typefoundry. The term "independent" refers to the fact that the company has no ties to any device, platform, or environment. The founders philosophized that the industry required a type vendor that could supply high-quality typefaces in any and all standard font formats. Now after more than ten years, Bitstream has emerged as a leader in quality and has been noted for its commitment to typographic authenticity.

The Bitstream Typeface Library was developed under the supervision of Matthew Carter, the creator of such esteemed typefaces as Snell, Bell Centenial, Bitstream Swiss™ Compressed, and ITC Galliard® & ITC Charter.® Carter set uncommonly high standards for the company's highly-skilled design staff. Working from the earliest-generation artwork available, each character of every typeface is hand-digitized on advanced workstations specially programmed by Bitstream's engineers.

In building the library, Carter has overseen the licensing of typefaces from such respected international sources as the International Typeface Corporation (ITC), Kingsley-ATF Type Corporation, and Fundicion Tipografica Neufville SA, among others.

A growing number of the typeface designs in the Library are Bitstream Originals or Exclusives. Bitstream Originals are typefaces designed by Bitstream's own in-house type designers. Bitstream Exclusives are typefaces by some of the world's greatest type designers digitized and published only by Bitstream.

The Bitstream Typeface Library features a unique naming convention and a number of other quality and ease-of-use enhancements. This naming scheme allows you to clearly distinguish between the various font names and styles, and eliminates the possibility of font name conflicts.

Bitstream typefaces offer the highest possible degree of technical excellence. All fonts comform fully to published technical specifications to ensure hassle-free use and compatibility with existing hardware & software. And, Typefaces are never simply "converted" from one technology to another. Each typeface is re-engineered and hinted for optimum results in each individual font format.

To ensure optimum letterfit and character spacing, Bitstream typefaces include extensive kerning data—an average of 300-500 kerning pairs per face.

Bitstream's commitment to maintaining the highest level of typographic standards, and to providing typefaces in the important technical formats for all platforms further establishes Bitstream as the ideal source for all your digital type needs.

Many countries provide for the legal protection of typeface names only, not the designs themselves. This means that the original names of many typefaces can only be used with a license from the owner. The majority of Bitstream typefaces in this catalog have licensed names (on which royalties are paid), or have historical names that reside in the public domain, or have names to which Bitstream owns the rights. In these cases, the name is used. When the original name is not available for use by Bitstream, an alternative name appears.

For example, Swiss 721 is the name that Bitstream uses for its version of the typeface popularly known as Helvetica.® Because the original name of that typeface is not widely licensed, there are many offerings of the design from different vendors with many different names. It is important to note, however, that the use of an alternative name has no bearing on the inherent quality or authenticity of the typeface design.

A NOTE ON TYPEFACE NAMES

It is important to note that the type design community, through membership in the Association Typographique Internationale, has established an ethical standard of honoring and policing itself from producing derivative designs for a period of 15 years from the time of the introduction of an original design. Bitstream is a member of this organization, and adheres rigorously to this standard.

In assembling the Library, Bitstream has sought out (and pays royalties to) the originator when a license for the use of a trademarked name can be obtained. Additionally, a number of the faces in the Library have ancient origins, and their names are in the public domain. Some faces are derivative of designs of more than 15 years old (whose names are not licensed). The remainder were designed at Bitstream—where the rights reside. The total collection comes together as a richly varied library with excellent type designs for every publishing or graphic design need.

The Bitstream Classification divides typefaces into groups by their underlying structure, and therefore also by their color, texture, and purpose. A user of the Bitstream catalog may use classification names to help find typefaces with specific characteristics.

Typefaces are further distinguished by a three-digit number. The first digit refers to x-height—the higher the number, the larger the x-height. The second two digits are used to group similar faces together within each class.

The Bitstream Library is divided into 15 major classifications whose names feature prominently throughout the catalog:

Oldstyle

Transitional
At the end of the 18th century the diagonal pen-derived stress, with its mild contrast in stroke weight, gave way to a style with more vertical stress and more pronounced contrast. Typefaces intermediate in form between Oldstyle and the fully evolved Modern are classified as Transitional.

Modern
Typefaces with vertical stress and a strong contrast between thick and thin strokes. The vertical stress is probably a product of 18th century rationalism, and the increased stroke contrast a result of refinements in printing techniques. Sub-groups in this class are Elliptical, Deco, and Industrial.

Clarendon
Typefaces with vertical stress, mild contrast in stroke weight, and bracketed serifs. Sub-groups in this class are Century, News and Stubserif.

Slabserif
These faces differ from Clarendons in having no curved brackets to their serifs. Slabserifs can be seen as sans serif letterforms with unbracketed serifs added to the ends of the strokes. Sub-groups in this class are Egyptian, Geometric Slabserif, Humanist Slabserif and Square Slabserif.

Latin
Like most sans serif faces and the Slabserifs, this class has its origins in 19th century display typography. Latins are distinguished by triangular and sharply pointed serifs. Also in this class are the Flareserifs.

Freeform
During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, a number of typefaces appeared with unusual freedom in their forms. Though not informal enough to be classified as scripts, these faces fall outside the classifications of other kinds of serifed type.

Sans Serif
Typefaces without serifs. The first Sans serifs were mid-19th century revivals of pre-typographic letterforms cut in stone. The powerful simplicity of the Sans serif form was refined and elaborated during the 20th century. Sub-groups of this large class are Geometric, Gothic, Humanist, Incised, Informal and Swiss.

Engravers'
Typefaces derived from lettering engraved in metal printing plates. Sub-groups include Engravers' Oldstyle, Engravers's Modern and Copperplate.

Stencil
Typefaces designed with gaps in their letterforms to simulate stencil lettering.

Stike-On
Typographic faces adapted from cruder devices such as typewriters and daisy-wheel printers; or faces modified so that all characters are of a uniform width. Sub-groups include Fixed Pitch, Typewriter and Monospaced.

Computer
Typefaces related to or imitative of computer technology. Sub-groups are OCR and MICR.

Decorated
Ornamental types whose decoration conceals the underlying form and becomes the most important characteristic.

Script
Pen-written or brush-drawn letters simulated as type. Sub-groups in this class are Blackletter, Brush, Chancery, English, French, Formal, Freehand, Ribbon, Staccato and Uncial.

KEY TO TYPEFACE SAMPLES

The typeface samples in this catalog are set in 14 point type and arranged in such a way that you can see a generous selection of the total characters included in each font. All the information that you need to identify and order typefaces is found next to the typeface name. To help you understand which component is which, this key points out and labels the information presented in the typeface samples.
